OCTOBER 22, 1767. THE NUMBER 857.

VIRGINIA GAZETTE.

With the lateſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtick.

From the BRISTOL JOURNAL.

To the PRINTER.

HAVING lately read in one of the papers ſome account of the barbarous treatment of two poor children who were placed under the care of a painter and his wife, in Fleur de Lys court, Fetter lane, the circumſtances appeared to me ſo extraordinary that I imagined the relation muſt have been exaggerated, as is frequently the caſe. In order therefore to ſatisfy myſelf more fully concerning it, I have inquired, and been informed (by perſons who were eye and ear witneſſes, and who live upon the ſpot) of ſome of the following ſhocking particulars, from the mouth of the younger child; for they were expoſed a conſiderable time in the court, that every one might behold theſe objects of ſavage cruelty, and bear witneſs to the horrid tale, which was as follows: That they had been confined for three years, for the moſt part in the cellar, where hogs were kept, and employed there in grinding colours for their maſter; their only food was a piece of bread a day, without even water to drink, ſupplying that want from the hogs trough. They had not lain in a bed during the whole time. That their miſtreſs uſed frequently, and without any cauſe, to tie them up by their hands, ſtretched out, to a ſtaple fixed in the ceiling, after ſtripping them ſtark naked, whip them until her ſtrength was exhauſted, and they were covered with wounds; after which ſhe faſtened their leather bodice upon them, which cleaving to their lacerated fleſh eat into their bodies, until the inhuman tigreſs renewed her cruelties, which we may ſuppoſe were every time more intolerable than the preceding. The eldeſt, who is 17 years of age, ſhe ſcourged no leſs than ſix times the Friday before the diſcovery, whereby, and by her former uſage, ſhe was one continued ſore, covered with gaſhes from head to foot, her fleſh ſeemed putrified, and appeared rather as if cut with knives than whips, her head was ſwelled to an enormous ſize, her eyes imperceptible, and her ſpeech gone. An iron collar, that was put about her neck, had tore that and her ſhoulders in a moſt terrible manner. The youngeſt, 13 years old, is likewiſe a miſerable ſpectacle. She declared to an acquaintance of the writer of this that ſometimes after they had been whipped the blood which ſtreamed from the wounds formed puddles underneath them where they ſat in the cellar. When the miſtreſs went into the country ſhe cauſed them to be chained up in that filthy place until her return, which they dreaded more than death, which would have put a period to their ſufferings. Still longer would this diabolical tragedy have been acted had not theſe two poor wretches been providentially diſcovered by the ſervant maid of a baker in the ſaid court, who looking from a window perceived ſomething like human appearances, very bloody, at a trap door (whither they had crawled for freſh air) which was ſuppoſed to be opened to give vent to the ſtench of the hogs-ſty.

The CRISS-CROSS ROW, 1767.

SINCE every day great examples affords
That authors, and others, can trifle with words,
I'll do like the reſt, I'll be apeing my betters,
I'll take up my hornbook, and play with my letters:
Great A ſtands for Able and Adminiſtration,
And B ſtands for Bubbles and Bites in high ſtation;
(O Britain, thrice happy! from ſuch things exempt,
Thy ſtate ſo remotely remov'd from contempt!)
C ſtands for Corruption, for Court, and for C——n,
And D ſtands for Dunces (K—s ſometimes create 'em)
F for Evil oft ſtands, which no one dares touch,
Becauſe ſome have no power, and others too much;
F ſtands for Finances, in general uſe,
And G ſtands for Government, Gambling, and Gooſe;
H ſure ſtands for Honour, but O! grief of grief!
The robe of true honour oft hangs on a thief;
And I ſtands for Intereſt, which great men purſue,
So bent on the chaſe that they've nought elſe in view;
And K ſtands for Kid, and for King, and for Kite,
L ſtands for ſome Lawyer——beware of a bite;
M ſtands for Memento and Monarch I ween,
And N ſtands for Nothing excelling the ——;
When an O and a P ſtand for Office and Penſion,
Look on Q as a Query for juſt reprehenſion;
And R ſtands for Riband, and Riches, and Rogue,
And S ſtands for Sinecures, greatly in vogue;
T ſtands for Turncoat—Old England beware!
V ſtands for Vulture—redouble your care!
And W ſtands for Wiſdom and Whigs,
Who've propt up Great Britain by tricks and intrigues;
X typifies Xerxes wild laſhing the ſea;
Be like it, ye Britons! no tyrant obey!
And Y ſtands for Youth (we ſee that on the T——e)
And Z ſtands for Zeal for our monarch alone,
And & per ſe and for—the reſt is well known.

SIR,

DINING at Lady Ramble's the other day, it was propoſed, after dinner, by her Ladyſhip's ſiſter, to hear Miſs, who is a fine girl of about 11 years of age, concerning ſome points ſhe had been inſtructed in relative to her duty in life; which being agreed to, her Ladyſhip deſired Miſs to ſtand up, and then aſked the queſtions, and received the anſwers, following; and as they may be of ſervice to other young Ladies of Quality, I have tranſmitted them to you. SOCRATISSA.

L. R.—My dear! pray tell me what you was brought into the world for?

Miſs.—A huſband.

L. R.—O, my dear! you ſhould ſay to be admired.

Aunt.—Well, I vow I think my niece has given a better anſwer, as ſhe came to the point directly, and brought the matter home at once.

L. R.—What is the duty of a huſband?

Miſs.—To pleaſe his wife.

L. R.—What is the duty of a wife?

Miſs.—To pleaſe herſelf.

L. R.—What are the principal objects on which a fine Lady ſhould fix her attention?

Miſs.—Dreſs and admiration.

L. R.—What is the chief uſe of a fine Lady's eyes?

Miſs.—To ſtare and ogle at the men.

L. R.—What is the buſineſs of a fine Lady?

Miſs.—To play at cards, go to routs, balls, plays, operas, &c. and carry on intrigues.

L. R.—What is the religion of a fine Lady?

Miſs.—To pay her devotions at Court, and make her curtſies in the Drawing Room.

L. R.—May a fine Lady ever go to Church?

Miſs.—Very ſeldom; and then ſhe muſt be ſure to ſleep there, or to talk very loud, and to ſlander ſome of her acquaintance.

L R.—Which is the beſt book in the world?

Miſs.—Hoyle on Quadrille.

L. R.—From whence come the politeſt faſhions and the beſt ſilks?

Miſs.—From France.

L. R.—Who make the beſt ſervants?

Miſs.—The French.

L. R.—Very well, my dear! you don't forget I find.

Aunt.—I vow my niece is very perfect in her education, and will make a fine accompliſhed woman.

LONDON, Auguſt 6.

A LETTER from Scotland ſays that the new intended canal from Perth to Forfar will in part be carried by the river Iſla, from thence paſt Glamis caſtle to Forfar; and that they do not deſpair of joining it with the river Southeſk, near the caſtle of Airly. The Southeſk empties itſelf by Montroſe.

The town of Campbelton, building on the ſea coaſt between Fort George and Nairn in Scotland, within a mile of the former, goes on with great forwardneſs; about 100 houſes being already built, merchants and tradeſmens ſhops eſtabliſhed, with a weekly market for proviſions, and ſeveral fiſhing boats erected. This is of the greateſt convenience to the military in the garriſon, whereby they are now ſupplied with every neceſſary.

Sunday evening a great concourſe of people aſſembled in Moorfields to hear two itinerant preachers, the one a tailor and the other a dier, when they entered into a diſpute about religion, which exaſperated the people ſo much that ſeveral battles enſued; the tailor was beat in a terrible manner, had his head broke, was kicked about the fields, and it is thought would have been killed, had not ſome Gentlemen interfered, and got him from the mob.

We hear that a Gentleman of a ſedentary life, who has been long indiſpoſed with indigeſtion and the hypochondriack paſſion, tried riding and ſeveral other ſorts of exerciſes, but with little effect, was at laſt prevailed upon, by the advice of an eminent phyſician, to try being toſſed in a blanket, which was accordingly performed every other morning for a fortnight, and has been attended with the greateſt ſucceſs, the Gentleman being now much better than he has been for two years paſt.

We are informed there are 380 perſons confined for debt within the walls of the King's Bench priſon, which added to what are in the Rules makes the number amount to above 1000.

A correſpondent writes: "It is now ſeriouſly hoped that there will be little difficulty in getting the Scots to pay an equal proportion of the land tax with the Engliſh; a thing become highly reaſonable, and nothing againſt it but the articles of union, which the Scots conſider as their MAGNA CHARTA. To pave the way for an equal taxation, a trial is making in Scotland of the law of patronage, which is alſo contrary to the articles of union, but to which the Scots appear to ſubmit very patiently; and proper means have been uſed to form a prevailing party even in the General Aſſembly of their church, that this preliminary meaſure being once fixed, the long wiſhed for taxation may be eaſily carried into execution.

NEWCASTLE, Auguſt 1. On Thurſday laſt news was brought to town from Berwick of the deplorable death of Mr. Dent, late apothecary to the infirmary here; who on Sunday, after having ſhown great depreſſion of ſpirits for ſome time, called on the maid ſervant of the houſe where he lodged and gave her his watch and pocketbook, telling her to give them to her miſtreſs and acquaint her he was going to drown himſelf. Whereupon he went out, and walked towards the ſea, in which time the ſervant had informed the family, who immediately followed Mr. Dent; but before they could overtake him he had thrown himſelf from a high rock into the ſea, and in the fall had ſtruck his head upon the rocks at the bottom, ſo that though he was directly taken out of the water with ſome remains of life, he unhappily expired in a few minutes after.

BATH, Auguſt 10. Saturday laſt about 500 ſhearmen, from the clothing towns of this county and Wiltſhire, aſſembled together upon Corſley heath, and went in a body to Horniſham, near Warminſter, Wilts, and pulled down and deſtroyed a new gig mill, juſt erected for dreſſing broadcloth, belonging to Mr. Everet, of that place, whereby one man and a boy could do as much work in two hours as thirty men could do in a day.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.

Laſt Wedneſday (after the moſt ſerene morning) came on, about 9 o'clock in the evening, and continued for ſeveral hours, a more violent ſtorm of wind and rain, with ſome thunder and lightning, than has been known here for many years; which did ſome damage to the ſhipping and ſmall craft lying at the wharfs, and at anchor in the harbour. A brig was drove high aſhore on Dorcheſter neck, and ſeveral boats from the town, that had been out on parties of pleaſure, which could not reach the town before the ſtorm came on, were drove into Gallows bay, and ſome of them ſtove to pieces. Several of the town fiſhing boats are yet miſſing, and it is feared are loſt. Mr. Anthony Hadley, returning home to Stoneham from this town, whither he had been with a load of marketing, was belated; and by the fury of the tempeſt, added to the darkneſs of the night, loſt his way, and periſhed on the road; and, what is very remarkable, Mr. Hadley's ſon, returning home from his work, miſſed his way alſo, and met an untimely end in the horrours of that diſmal night. The father was 90 years of age, and has left a widow and 3 children, the ſon 52, and has alſo left a widow and 8 children, to bemoan their unhappy fate. A Gentleman and his Lady, who had juſt landed on one of the wharfs from a boat that had been below, was, by the extreme darkneſs of the night, led to the edge of the wharf, and both fell into the water, and would probably have been drowned, had not ſome of the company immediately aſſiſted, and got them out. Captain Skimmer from Briſtol happily came to an anchor within the Lighthouſe, about half an hour before the ſtorm came on; and notwithſtanding he had both his anchors out, was in great danger of being forced among the rocks. A perſon on board Captain Skimmer the day preceding the ſtorm ſays that from the maſt head he counted near 40 ſail of fiſhing boats, ſloops, ſchooners, &c. in the bay, and it is greatly feared that ſome of them were ſwallowed up in the ſea, which ran prodigious high. We hear the ſtorm has done conſiderable damage in the country, by blowing down trees, fences, fruit, &c. In ſhort, the oldeſt ſeamen ſay they never experienced a more terrible gale.

Since the above account went to the preſs, two Gentlemen of this town, who were paſſengers on board a ſloop from the eaſtern parts of the province, came to town from Plymouth, where they happily got in the next day after the ſtorm, with about 30 others, and among them one of the town fiſhing boats.

A ſmall ſchooner arrived here laſt evening from Plymouth; the maſter informs that on his paſſage he ſaw a number of veſſels aſhore, but could not tell who they were.

PHILADELPHIA, October 8.

Extract of a letter from Cohanſey, in New Jerſey, dated September 28.

"We have the moſt dreadful havock among our horſes with the diſtemper ever heard of. By the moſt reaſonable computation, I do not think 20000 l. would repair the loſs to this one county; it has taken off all our beſt horſes and colts, and left nothing but hackneys behind."

Arrived at Madeira, from Virginia, the Captains Hatton and Latimer.

WILLIAMSBURG, October 22.

Col. Terry, from Halifax county, informs that ſome time in Auguſt laſt a man was taken up and committed to their gaol, who upon examination confeſſed himſelf one of Depriеſt's gang, and that he, with others, guarded the ſaid Depriеſt until he had ſtruck 60,000 l. Maryland currency, the bills moſtly of the Dollar denomination. And ſome Gentlemen now in town inform that Depriеſt himſelf is now apprehended, and committed to Frederick county gaol in Maryland.

On the 10th of July laſt died, in Halifax county, Mary Hogan, aged 91 years, who for 51 days before her death took no other ſuſtenance than two ſpoonfuls of ſour milk. This is a fact.
